Stone Veneer is a thin layer of any stone used as decorative facing material that is not meant to be load bearing. Veneer stone is a great choice for homeowners looking to add a unique and natural look to their home. It is also a great option for those looking for a more affordable alternative to natural stone. Veneer stone is easy to install and maintain, making it a great choice.

As buildings began to grow taller with the advent of skeletal steel framing, it became necessary to diminish the thickness and weight of masonry walls in order to withstand the dead weight of the building. Without steel supports, load bearing walls could grow several meters thick on their lowest stories. A solution employed in the construction of early skyscrapers was the use of a steel structural frame that supported exterior stone walls at every floor, thereby distributing the load into the frame. This avoided a gradual buildup of weight that resulted in inconveniently thick lower walls.

The direct or adhered fixing system relies on a mortar or cement bonding between the substrate wall and the backside of the stone veneer. This application is generally used indoors as exterior weathering and temperature extremes cause the veneer to crack and spall.
